Market Commentary

Our long positions in tech/internet names were hit hard in March along with the sell-off of major U.S. tech stocks in a series of negative developments - Facebook data misuse, fatal accident related to autonomous motor vehicle, and the Trump administration's potential attack on Amazon. One of our top negative contributors during the month is our long position in YY Inc (YY US, market cap USD 6.2bn).

YY is one of the largest video live streaming platforms in China. During 4Q17, YY Live (a music and entertainment live streaming platform, 74% of revenue) grew by 42% yoy to USD 424mn with OPM 22.7%. HUYA (e-sports broadcasting, 19% of revenue) a unit of YY grew by 107% yoy to USD 110mn with OPM -0.3%. The company had 76.5mn mobile MAU and 6.5mn paying users. Average spending per paying user was RMB 518 (USD 82) per quarter (21% yoy) mostly in the form of tipping to performers or show hosts.

YY's share price has been weak since 5th of March as the company announced its 4Q17 earnings. It guided its revenue to grow 32~39% yoy during 1Q18 compared to 46~48% yoy growth in the previous two quarters. And the company announced HUYA received USD 460mn funding from Tencent (700 HK, the largest on-line/mobile gaming company) with the option to purchase HUYA's additional shares at fair market price to reach 50.1% of the voting power in between two and three years from the date of the deals anniversary. HUYA has filed for IPO in the US targeting to raise USD 200mn with a USD 2bn valuation within this year.

The company's current market cap of USD 6.2bn looks very cheap given (1) USD 600mn LTM operating cash flow; (2) 20~30% growth outlook as a market share gainer in flourishing video live streaming industry; (3) growing option value from HUYA with Tencent's commitment to booming e-sports broadcasting industry; and (4) 1.3bn net cash on the balance sheet.
